About the Seminar

Values are the basic morals for survival of human race in its best form. The good values ought to be inculcated in the human as it can be the only sole for human survival on Earth. In the contemporary era when we are on the moon and trying to explore the sun with the fear of natural resources scarcity in coming years, it goes very important to talk on sustainable development goals. All the 17 goals are very far sighted and not only talk of safety of resources but also talk about right allocation and judicious use of it. Life is only possible in a peaceful global environment where we not only talk about the 17 points but also inculcate all the points in ourselves as values and lifestyle. The global war and health concerns are challenges in achieving the goal which can't be denied.

Concerning all these major factors Institute of vocational studies has decided to hold a seminar on one of the most concerned topic Education and sustainable development so that the light bearers of the society our dear students could present their ideas and views in the form of their research papers.
